The West Chase neighborhood is reminiscent of an earlier time in California. When room for kids to play and flowers to grow was the rule rather than the exception.

The homes of West Chase. White, hand-troweled stucco walls and red tile roofs set against green lawns and clear blue skies. Dramatic. Energy-efficient. With features and space that growing families need. Cozy fireplaces. Skylights. Big, sunny windows to take full advantage of the views. Lots of storage. Formal and informal areas for entertaining. Yards planned to be functional as well as aesthetic.

Rancho Penasquitos. An All-American hometown of personal charm and youthful energy. A planned community. Close to everything from shopping and entertainment to restaurants and employment centers. Downtown San Diego is an easy commute.

It all adds up to home. The neighborhood. The houses. The community. Where kids still play in Little League and neighbors get together for barbecue; where Saturday morning is likely to find you jogging around the park or teeing off at the community course. Its home and its all right here—yours for the taking. At West Chase.
